AFFIDAVIT OF ALLAN J. LICHTMAN, Ph.D.

I, Allan J. Lichtman, being first duly sworn, depose and say:

1. I am over 18 years of age, legally competent to give this affidavit and have personal knowledge of the facts set forth in this affidavit.

2. I am a Distinguished Professor of History at American University in Washington, DC and formerly Associate Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and Chair of the Department of History. I received my BA in History from Brandeis University in 1967 and my Ph.D. in History from Harvard University in 1973, with a specialty in the mathematical analysis of historical data. My areas of expertise include political history, electoral analysis, and historical and quantitative methodology. I am the author of numerous scholarly works on quantitative methodology in social science. This scholarship includes articles in such academic journals as Political Methodology, Journal of Interdisciplinary History, International Journal of Forecasting, and Social Science History. In addition, I have coauthored Ecological Inference with Dr. Laura Langbein, a standard text on the analysis of social science data, including political information. I have published articles on the application of social science analysis to civil rights issues. This work includes articles in such journals as Journal of Law and Politics, La Raza Law Journal, Evaluation Review, Journal of Legal Studies, and National Law Journal. My scholarship also includes the use of quantitative and qualitative techniques to conduct contemporary and historical studies, published in such academic journals as The Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, The American Historical Review, Forecast, and The Journal of Social History. Quantitative and historical analyses also ground my books, Prejudice and the Old Politics: The Presidential Election of 1928, The Thirteen Keys to the Presidency (co-authored with Ken DeCell), The Keys to the White House, and White Protestant Nation: The Rise of the American Conservative Movement. My most recent book, White Protestant Nation, was one of five finalists for the National Book Critics Circle Award for the best general nonfiction book published in America.

3. I have worked as a consultant or expert witness for both plaintiffs and defendants in some eighty voting and civil rights cases. These include several cases in the state of North Carolina. In late 2011, I was the expert witness in Illinois for the prevailing state parties in separate litigation challenging both the adopted state plan for the State House and for Congress.¹ My work includes more than a dozen cases for the United States Department of Justice and cases for many civil rights organizations. I have also worked as a consultant or expert witness in defending enacted plans from voting rights challenges. A copy of my resume and a table of cases are attached as Appendix I of this report.

4. I have been asked to consider the African-American voting age population needed for State House, State Senate, and Congressional Districts in North Carolina that provide African Americans the ability to elect candidates of their choice. In particular I have been asked to consider whether it is necessary to create such districts that are 50 percent or more African American in their voting age population.

5. My expected fee in this matter is $400 per hour. I have enclosed an updated CV and a table of cases in which I have provided written or oral testimony.

Data and Methods

6. The voting analysis in this report relies on standard data utilized in social science: precinct by precinct election returns for each candidate in election studied, with candidates identified by race and precinct by precinct breakdowns of voting age African Americans and whites, which includes a small number of Asians and members of other races. The election and demographic data and the racial identification of candidates were obtained from the NC State Board of Elections via counsel. To estimate the voting of African Americans and whites, the analysis utilizes the standard methodology of ecological regression that I have employed in some

80 previous cases and applied to the analysis of many thousands of elections and the study of numerous redistricting plans. The ecological regression procedure estimates the voting behavior of demographic groups such as African Americans and whites by comparing the racial composition of voting precincts to the division of the vote among competing candidates in each precinct. It produces an equation that estimates both the turnout and voting for each candidate by each voter group. The procedure was accepted by the Supreme Court in Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30 (1986), and applied by the Court to single-member districts plans in Quilter v. Voinovich, 113 S. Ct 1149 (1993). My analysis based on these methods was cited authoritatively several times by the United States Supreme Court in the Congressional redistricting case, League of United Latin Am. Citizens (LULAC) v. Perry, 548 U.S. 399 (2006).²

7. This report also follows standard practice in the field by using the results of past elections and voting patterns by minority and white voters to assess prospects for minority voters in newly crafted districts. This method is utilized on a standard basis when there is population growth and shifts in population that require the redrawing of districts in which the electorate will not be precisely the same as in previous districts. In this case, moreover, the analysis is highly reliable in that it covers a large number of districts that will include most of the electorate included in newly drawn districts. The electoral analysis is also specific to State House, State Senate, and Congressional elections.

Results of Analysis

² For a scholarly analysis of ecological regression and why it works well in the context of analyzing the voting of racial groups, see, Allan J. Lichtman, "Passing the Test: Ecological Regression in the Garza Case and Beyond," Evaluation Review 15 (1991). Bernard Grofman, the expert witness in the Gingles case, and myself were co-originators of the specific statistical methodology used here, see, Bernard Grofman, Lisa Handley, Richard G. Niemi, Minority Representation and the Quest for Voting Equality (New York: Cambridge University Press, 1992), pp. 102, 146.

8. The results of analysis apply to the two most recent elections years of 2008 and 2010 and cover all existing State House, State Senate, and Congressional Districts that are 40 percent or more African-American in their voting age populations, either as created under the 2000 Census or as currently constituted under the 2010 Census. The study examined Democratic primary elections, given that African Americans are overwhelmingly Democratic in North Carolina and general elections.

9. With respect first to State House Districts, the results of analysis demonstrate that of twenty-one 40%+ black voting age population districts studied, African-American candidates prevailed in all elections in 18 districts and a white candidate of choice of African-American voters prevailed in one election in another district (HD 27). There were only two exceptions to this near universal pattern. In House District 8 a white candidate who was not the primary election candidate of choice of African-American voters was elected in 2008 and 2010. However, House District 8 is a 50%+ black voting age population district and the white candidate won with more than 60 percent of the vote. The white candidate would have won even if this district were 60 percent black in voting age population. The only other 40%+ black voting age population State House district in which a white candidate who was not the candidate of choice of African-American voters prevailed was in House District 102. In one election, the 2010 Democratic primary contest, the white incumbent Becky Carney, who was not the candidate of choice of African-American voters prevailed. This was also a very low turnout election in which less than 5 percent of whites or blacks of voting age participated. Thus, in 40%+ black voting age population State House Districts relevant to this litigation, black candidates or a white candidate of choice of black voters prevailed in all elections in 19 out of 21 districts, for a win rate of 90 percent.

10. With respect to State Senate Districts, the results of analyzing 40%+ black voting age population districts demonstrate that of eight districts studied, African-American candidates prevailed in all elections in six districts and a white candidate of choice of African-American voters prevailed in all elections in another district. The lone exception to this pattern is Senate District 3 in which a white candidate who was not the candidate of choice of African-American voters was elected in 2008 and 2010. Thus, in 40%+ black voting age population districts relevant to this litigation, African-American candidates or the candidates of choice of African-American voters prevailed in all elections in 7 of 8 districts, for a win rate of 88 percent.

11. With respect to Congressional Districts, the results of analysis demonstrate that of two districts studied, African-American candidates prevailed in all elections in both districts. Thus, in 40%+ congressional districts, candidates or the candidates of choice of African-American voters prevailed in all elections in 2 of 2 districts, for a win rate of 100 percent.

12. The results of combining the analysis of elections for State House, State Senate, and Congress in relevant parts of the state demonstrate that either African-American candidates or candidates of choice of African-American voters prevailed in all elections in 28 of 31 40%+ black voting age population districts studied for a win rate of 90 percent. Thus, it is not necessary in North Carolina to create effective African-American opportunity districts with African-American voting age populations of 50 percent or more. The result of creating such districts is to waste African-American votes that could expand the ability of African Americans to influence the political process in other districts.

13. Tables 4 to 5, show the results of creating 50%+ African-American districts for State House and State Senate districts. As compared to the benchmark existing plan, the state-passed proposed plan for State House needlessly packs African Americans into Districts greater than 50 percent black in their voting age population. The result is to diminish substantially the influence of African-American voters in other House districts. As indicated in Table 4, the existing benchmark State House plan has 32 districts that are 30% or more black in their voting age population, compared to 26 in the state-passed proposed State House plan. As indicated in Table 5, the existing benchmark State Senate plan has 15 districts that are 30% or more black in their voting age population, compared to 10 in the state-passed proposed State Senate plan.

14. In sum, Analysis of recent elections in North Carolina demonstrates that it is not necessary to create African-American opportunity districts with African-American voting age populations greater than 50 percent. Rather the result of creating such districts is to unnecessarily pack African Americans in districts with the result that in other districts the influence of African Americans in North Carolina elections is diminished. These opinions are consistent with the findings of Dr. Theodore Arrington who wrote the following in his affidavit:

These statistics indicate that a primary purpose of precinct splitting was to segregate the races into separate districts. Black voters were placed in packed districts with far higher concentrations than are necessary to give them a reasonable opportunity to elect representatives of their choice or their ability to elect such representatives. I know that these concentrations are excessive based on my extensive study of voting in North Carolina including work on Section 5 preclearance for the Department of Justice and various voting rights cases beginning with my work on the Gingles case.³

OTHER POSITIONS

Director of Forensics, Brandeis University, 1968-71

Director of Forensics, Harvard University, 1971-72

Chair, New York-New England Debate Committee, 1970-71

Historical consultant to the Kin and Communities Program of the Smithsonian Institution
1974-1979

Along with general advisory duties, this position has involved the following activities:

1. directing a national conference on techniques for studying historical and contemporary families held at the Smithsonian in June 1976.
2. chairing a public session at the Smithsonian on how to do the history of one's own family.
3. helping to direct the Sixth International Smithsonian Symposium on Kin and Communities in America (June 1977).
4. editing the volume of essays from the symposium.

Consultant to John Anderson campaign for president, 1980.

I researched and wrote a study on "Restrictive Ballot Laws and Third-Force Presidential Candidates." This document was a major component of Anderson's legal arguments against restrictive ballot laws that ultimately prevailed in the Supreme Court (Anderson v. Celebrezze 1983). According to Anderson's attorney: "the basis for the majority's decision echoes the themes you incorporated in your original historical piece we filed in the District Court."

Statistical Consultant to the George Washington University Program of Policy Studies in Science and Technology, 1983

I advised researchers at the Policy Studies Program on the application of pattern recognition techniques to their work on the recovery of communities from the effects of such natural disasters as earthquakes and floods.

Consultant to the New York City Charter Revision Commission, 2000-2006

I analyzed the implications of non-partisan elections for voting rights issues for the Charter Revision Commissions appointed by mayors Rudy Giuliani and Michael Bloomberg.
